“10th best college newspaper” – Princeton Review, 2018

Dear advertiser,

Thank you for considering Pipe Dream to connect with Binghamton University students. As Binghamton University’s oldest and largest student-run newspaper, Pipe Dream is the primary source of news and commentary for students, faculty, staff, administrators, alumni and community members on and off campus. We serve as a voice for the students at Binghamton University, and we’re excited to help bring your message to our audience.

Pipe Dream was founded in 1946 as The Colonial News, an independent, student-run publication. Currently, Pipe Dream prints twice per week on Mondays and Thursdays, with a total circulation of 7,000 issues. We have racks in nearly every building on campus, including the Innovation Technology Center and the University Downtown Center, so that every student and faculty member has access to our paper. We distribute our paper free of charge.

We engage with roughly 18,000 students, faculty and community members – a large portion of the Binghamton population – through our content and business, covering on-campus and community news, events and sports programming. As an independent organization, we do not receive funding from Binghamton University or any of its departments. Rather, we gain revenue through advertising, donations, fundraisers and content sales. This allows us to remain entirely objective and unbiased while serving our audience.

Because we are entirely student-run, without the assistance of an adviser, we are incredibly passionate about student journalism and the paper we produce. Our staff members are proud of their work, and always strive to ensure that it is accurate, objective and relevant to our community.

We work with advertisers to create advertising campaigns that are meaningful to our audiences, and impactful for you. We offer a robust catalog of advertisements that have been curated to drive messages forward to students through strong print ads, contemporaneous digital ads and relevant branding. Our business staff specializes in media consulting, and can offer targeted advertising counsel to help you connect with Binghamton University students. Over Pipe Dream’s 73-year history, our staff and paper has continuously grown and improved, particularly with the advent of the internet and social media. Looking forward, we plan to continue expanding and improving our coverage, and we would be honored if you choose to grow with us.

Founded in 1946 as The Colonial News, Pipe Dream is Binghamton University's oldest and largest student newspaper. Pipe Dream is published independently by an Executive Board composed entirely of undergraduate students, without the supervision or assistance of an adviser.

Our print advertisements are priced by size. Our smallest size is a business card size, and advertisements can be as large as a full page! Print advertisements are extremely effective at catching readers attention, conveying messages and displaying images. These advertisements also work well for printed coupons and flashy headlines. Color is available on all of our print advertisements for an additional $200, and Pipe Dream offers design services for an additional 50 percent of the advertisement rate you choose.
